CEO LETTER

Dear Ed Fund Community,

Since I came on board as CEO of the Ed Fund in July 2023, I have been awed by the passion and commitment within this community. I've watched our partners and donors be catalysts for profound change by showing up in myriad ways. It was incredible to see companies like Rakuten arrive to their partner school, Buena Vista Horace Mann K-8, with much-needed supplies and support on the eve of a new school year, and amazing to collaborate with a donor on a new school playground that is well overdue to be reimagined and revitalized for its students. These acts are a testament to strength throughout our city, and it is this very commitment to action that propels the Ed Fund's mission forward.

The Ed Fund's 2022-2023 Annual Report celebrates the tireless collective effort of our staff as well as our essential partners at San Francisco Unified School District and the Department of Children, Youth, and Their Families. It is a testament to the generous support of our many wonderful donors and our volunteers who logged 20,000+ hours directly supporting teachers and students. With shared commitment, we are growing, cultivating, and tending to an equitable educational landscape, for the benefit of our city and its youth.

In the pages that follow, I am especially excited to share the results of two new Ed Fund programs designed to ensure that the promise of a quality education is fully available to the students most affected by Covid's disruptions. These are:

Accelerate Learning SF

Studies show that the most effective way to speed academic recovery in the wake of the pandemic is through sustained and coordinated effort. With Accelerate Learning, the Ed Fund will reach thousands of students with research-backed, high-impact tutoring services in SF's diverse communities. This work targets students who hold tremendous promise but historically haven't had access to services such as high-quality tutoring to help them reach grade level proficiency.

Priority Schools: During the 2022-2023 school year, the Ed Fund piloted a program prioritizing our time and resources into specific neighborhoods with concentrated needs: Bayview-Hunters Point, Excelsior/Visitacion Valley, Mission District/Bernal, and Tenderloin/SOMA. Over time, our vision is that all schools in the priority neighborhoods will be able to access educators grants, match with a Circle the Schools (CTS) partner, integrate high-impact tutoring, and receive other funding in partnership with the district. Last year we made a great start to this vision, as you'll see in our report.

Thank you so much for being part of this community and this very important work. With shared commitment, we are rising to meet the challenges of this moment and embracing its many learnings, for the benefit of our city and its youth.

In Community,

Ann Levy Walden

ABOUT THE ED FUND

VISION

We envision a future where San Francisco public school students have equitable access to quality education so that they can engage and enrich the community.

MISSION

The San Francisco Education Fund advances equitable education through learning acceleration programs, mental wellness initiatives, enhancing community engagement, and providing transformative financial resources to students, educators and schools.

IMPACT

How did we holistically support San Francisco public school students in the 2022-23 school year?

87

SFUSD schools received resources from the Ed Fund

300

ongoing weekly volunteers supported our teachers and students in academics, mentoring, mental health, and more.

25,808

volunteer hours have been provided to public school students and educators

Volunteer Time

Great schools need committed community volunteers, and the Ed Fund is proud to be the largest provider of volunteers for SFUSD.

Over

in resources went to students, teachers, and schools in the form of literacy tutoring supplies for elementary students, college scholarships for first generation SFUSD graduating seniors, fiscal sponsorship projects, grants for teachers and high school clubs, and more.

Did you know that that the estimated value of a volunteer hour in the United States reached $31.80 in 2022? That means that the equivalent of $820,694 was given to SFUSD schools in volunteer hours in the 22-23 school year!

APPROACH

Quality Learning

Academic and social emotional learning are necessary foundations to a successful life

Mental Wellness

Positive mental wellbeing of students and teachers is critical for students to engage in learning

Community Support

Caring and skilled volunteers add capacity to schools to enable a quality school experience

Financial Resources

Direct funding helps mitigate economic burdens so students and teachers can thrive

QUALITY LEARNING

CULTIVATING EAGER READERS WITH HIGH-IMPACT TUTORING

In the 2022-23 school year, the Ed Fund served 2,349 budding readers from 29 schools with high-impact tutoring, and we are seeing incredible results. Our data shows that the high users – student participants who attended 20 sessions or more – went from over a year behind grade level to nearly catching up to grade level.

In the Spring of 2023, the Ed Fund launched Accelerate Learning SF. This groundbreaking $3 million initiative will deliver learning acceleration to an additional 5,000 public school students—and bring on-the-ground capacity support to schools. Our goal is to remove additional burdens on teachers while still providing an excellent learning acceleration opportunity for their students.

Ana Garcia, a 3rd grade bilingual teacher at Guadalupe Elementary in the Excelsior serves as the site lead for our high-impact tutoring program at the school. In the last year, nearly every one of approximately 260 K-5th grade students at Guadalupe took part in after-school reading tutoring provided through the Ed Fund’s partnership with an online literacy provider. Ana’s efforts as an on-campus point person were key.

Sixty-five percent of the students at Guadalupe are Emergent Bilingual Learners, most speaking Spanish as their home language. Ana’s current 3rd grade class was learning from home for half of kindergarten and all of 1st grade. She sees a wide range of learning delays, correlated closely to whether students were lucky enough to have internet access, a computer, and a parent at home with them who is literate and proficient with technology during school closures. Students who did not have these advantages are still struggling—particularly those with special needs.

One of the tutoring program’s keys to success is that it meets students exactly where they are, Ana says. For example, her newcomer students have made incredible strides with the program’s multilingual intervention. One student came in knowing about half of his letters in Spanish. When he started the program in November, not only were his literacy skills minimal, his confidence in speaking was very low after years of being isolated from English-speaking peers. This student is now speaking more fluently and his reading skills are improving, in both English and Spanish. He’s motivated and engaged, looking for ways to express himself.

Another Guadalupe newcomer student was reticent to speak because of his difficulty pronouncing words. With the tutoring program and speech therapy, his confidence in speaking has increased. He moved from early first grade level to late second grade level reading in English.

“I really love the program because it allows me to give support to the students who need it,” Ana says. “My students require small groups in all the subjects—for reading, for writing, for math. [The tutoring program] provides extra support without taking away from what we’re learning, and the tutors have great skills and relationships with the students.”

MENTAL WELLNESS

PLANTING SEEDS OF WELLNESS THROUGH MINDFULNESS PROGRAM

Supporting mental wellness for students and teachers is a priority for the Ed Fund—and it has gained even more urgency over the last several years as more and more young people struggle with depression, anxiety, and social isolation in our city and throughout the U.S.

The Ed Fund’s mindfulness volunteers reached over 1,000 students from 13 SF schools in the 2022-23 school year, teaching simple awareness and breathing techniques that numerous studies show can effectively reduce stress, improve self-esteem, and prevent more serious mental health concerns.

Sonja Poloczek has been teaching mindfulness at Alvarado Elementary School since 2021, and was honored with the Mindfulness Volunteer of the Year award from the Ed Fund in 2023. The Ed Fund asked her to share some thoughts about her experience.

I studied psychology in college, and learned about the brain functioning as well as stress management and mindfulness. When I started doing yoga, I realized that being mindful in the movements actually helped me a lot.

Over time, I grew my mindfulness practice into other areas, like dance, communication, and my work with children. Mindfulness helped me be more understanding and accepting of all my feelings. It can be so much easier to be kind to others than to ourselves.

When I read about the need of mindfulness volunteers in one of the SFUSD newsletters, I thought this would be a great opportunity for me to combine two things that I love: spreading knowledge about mindfulness and working with kids.

At the beginning of the year, I could see how new and sometimes a little strange it was for the kids to find a mindful posture and practice focusing on their breathing. Towards the end of the year, however, it is so easy for them to be calm and breathe for more than a minute. I am so impressed by their progress and how much they take it into their everyday lives!

One teacher shared with me, “There will be positive life-long effects from the work you do at this early age. It is like you are bringing the seeds of love and peace and putting them in the children’s life gardens. As seeds germinate and pop up at different times, so will these wisdoms start to grow in the children’s lives at different times. You have opened pathways for a better life for all the children you have taught. Thank you so much.”

Sonja's advice for people who are looking to cultivate a mindfulness practice:

Start simple. Take a few deep belly breaths. Breathe in through your nose and out through your mouth. Fill your lungs and feel your belly expand. After a few times, notice how you are feeling. Maybe you feel a tickle in your chest or your belly feels warmer. Try to find a time to practice every day. It doesn't have to be long. Maybe before you get out of bed, at the bus stop, or before brushing your teeth.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

ENRICHING MINDS WITH CIRCLE THE SCHOOLS

The Ed Fund's Circle the Schools (CTS) program matches local corporate partners with public schools to bring volunteers and resources into San Francisco's highest needs schools. Each CTS company participates in 3-5 volunteer events each year that align with school priorities and company interests while advancing students' skills and exposing them to career possibilities. Some examples of events include: read-alouds, college application support, classroom setup day, and company office visits.

CTS corporate partners volunteered in 30 schools in 2022-2023. Some highlights from the year include:

WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT MONTH CAREER PANEL

In March at Cleveland Elementary, six Cisco/AppDynamics employees spoke to 50 students from the school's 4th and 5th grade classes. This impressive panel shared their career journeys, offered advice, and spoke about their experiences as women in the workplace.

BURTON'S WEEK WITHOUT WALLS

The Warriors gave 11th graders at Phillip & Sala Burton Academic High School a day to remember in March—and inspiration to carry into the future. During Burton's Week Without Walls, juniors participate in a series of offsite career learning experiences under the guidance of industry partners across the Bay Area. The Warriors joined in on this exciting opportunity by hosting 54 Burton juniors at Chase Center.

Students toured the Chase Center with a broadcasting professional and even learned how to operate one of the cameras used to capture live game footage. They spent the afternoon participating in a resume workshop, then had a chance to mingle with 15+ Warriors employees in numerous fields, including reporting, data analysis, partnership management, and information technology.

COMPUTER SCIENCE EDUCATION WEEK

In December, the Ed Fund was proud to work with two of our CTS corporate partners, Salesforce and AppDynamics, to host special events celebrating computer science and inspiring K-12 students to learn more about the field.

AppDynamics employees hosted an Hour of Code event for students from Cleveland Elementary, as part of what has become a worldwide movement to celebrate the field of computer science through simple activities that help to demystify “code” and broaden participation in the field. Students emerged from the workshop with more confidence in and understanding of the basics of coding.

Also in December, we collaborated with Salesforce and the Oakland Public Education Fund to host an exciting day of computer science-focused workshops at the Salesforce Tower for middle schoolers to learn about careers in STEM.

Thanks to our amazing CTS partners for supporting San Francisco’s youth throughout these years of pandemic and beyond!

COMMUNITY SUPPORT: NURTURING CONNECTION THROUGH MENTORING

The benefits of having a trusted adult in a school setting, especially for students from underserved groups, can be huge—from increased attendance to better grades to an improved sense of confidence, belonging, and connectedness.

The experience of building a special bond of trust and support with a child can be incredibly rewarding for mentors as well.

For two years, Ed Fund volunteer Chelsea Jones has been meeting weekly for lunch with her fourth-grade mentee. They focus on reading and writing fundamentals—but food always comes first. Over the years the two have become close, sharing stories, opinions, and many laughs.

“I’ve been able to build a beautiful dynamic with [my mentee],” Chelsea says. She has also had the satisfaction of witnessing first-hand how his literacy skills and confidence have greatly improved.

Alex Argo, another Ed Fund mentor and Young Leaders Council member, has supported her high school mentee for the past year through several major milestones—being elected president of her class, passing her permit test, and submitting college applications.

“A mentor has just as much to gain and learn from mentoring as the mentee,” Alex says. “My mentee has taught me the value of consistency and communication. I have learned that even when you might feel pressed for time, it is important to touch base and continue to maintain your constant presence.”

Chelsea’s advice for mentors:

Have a plan but know that it’s fine to go off script as needed... Have regular talks with their teacher or the school’s social worker. Get to know them and build relationships with them, too! Build community on campus, because the collective ultimately serves in the best interest of the student.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

SPREADING JOY WITH FINANCIAL SUPPORT

Students at Marshall Elementary in the Mission District listened eagerly as Joanna Ho, San Francisco educator and author, talked about what motivated her to write Eyes That Kiss in the Corners, a lyrical story that inspires children to take pride in their appearance and heritage. Afterward, they enjoyed studying the details of their own faces in mini mirrors and creating self-portraits with skin tone markers in all the shades. Finally, they “added some love,” decorating their finished self-portrait with sparkly glitter glue.

At the Ed Fund, we believe that minds grow best when they’re exposed to daily doses of delight, wonder, kindness, and connection—all on display in this experience at Marshall. We launched the Create Joy grants during the pandemic to provide an extra boost for students and teachers by supporting opportunities that cultivate joy, enhance engagement, and promote a caring and inclusive school culture. In 2022-2023, we awarded nearly $100,000 in Create Joy grants ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 to educators from eligible San Francisco public schools, impacting hundreds of students citywide. We also distributed three school-wide projects which received $10,000 each.

Marshall teacher Judy Viertel reported that the opportunity to hear a real live author speak, followed by an art project encouraging confidence and self-expression, allowed young readers to feel a deeper connection to their identities and to literacy.

Among the many other wonderful projects we funded last year were a revival of a high school’s baseball team after a 10-year absence, two field trips to farmers markets for 120 students where they interview farmers and learn about themselves, and a media arts class centered around creating content for the community.

The Ed Fund also awarded three school-wide grants of $10,000 each, one of which went to Longfellow Elementary for their project, “Joyful Learning through Outdoor Education and Adventures.” The grant revived a fifth-grade camp tradition and once again allowed all 5th graders to participate in CYO Camp, a 4-day outdoor education program in Occidental, about 90 minutes from San Francisco. With help from the Create Joy grant, every Longfellow 5th grader who wanted to attend was able to go to the camp last year. They were overjoyed—and a little nervous too, since for many of them, this was their first time spending the night away from their families. Teachers say that they’ve seen the impact of the program extend beyond the four days as students show a greater sense of trust in one another and confidence in their ability to take risks and learn collaboratively. It’s a joy for all of us at the Ed Fund to be a part of their growing and discovering.

THE ED FUND BECOMES THE FISCAL SPONSOR OF OPERATIONSTART, A YOUTH-LED NONPROFIT

At the Ed Fund, we work to mobilize community resources to support all public-school students in San Francisco. We know that this takes a community, and we work closely together with other organizations through Citywide Collaborations and Fiscal Sponsorship opportunities. The Ed Fund is proud to be the 501(c)(3) fiscal sponsor for initiatives and projects that work to improve outcomes for San Francisco youth.

In February 2023, the Ed Fund became the fiscal sponsor of OperationSTART, a youth-led nonprofit with a mission to bridge the opportunity divide. OperationSTART curates an online platform that allows Bay Area youth ages 14-18 to find opportunities and internships that they may want to pursue with the option of exploring different career paths. It also allows high school students to take the first step in exploring what they might want to major in at college.

As its fiscal sponsor, the Ed Fund provides OperationSTART with administrative support and guidance. In an interview with its three founders who are currently all enrolled in college – Tiffany Ian, Lilian Emelife and Johnny Lin— they each shared their roles in the startup nonprofit organization, which range from managing the organization (maintaining their online platform, writing grants etc.) to leading their programs, which curate internships and opportunities that students can access easily.

When asked about their origin story and how the three classmates came together to bring this idea to life, Tiffany responded, “We realized we had similar mindsets of wanting to find internships and opportunities during our high school years but weren’t able to find any of interest. We also realized that many internships and opportunities had to be researched on our own with little to no knowledge of what we really wanted in an internship. That was when Johnny came up with the idea of creating this platform and asked if we wanted to join in as well to help him make it come to life.” The Ed Fund is honored to provide administrative support to this innovative team in our shared mission to improve access to opportunities for high school students in the Bay Area.

A NEW SF LITERACY COALITION CONVENED BY THE ED FUND EMERGES TO MEET THE HISTORIC MOMENT IN EDUCATION FOLLOWING THE PANDEMIC

In partnership with 826 Valencia, the Ed Fund established the San Francisco Literacy Coalition in 2022, a collective of 10 local nonprofits providing literacy supports to children in grades PreK through 5th grade. Leveraging the deep expertise and relationships of participating organizations, the Coalition is creating strategic, citywide alignment on how to increase grade level reading and writing scores for 5,000 San Francisco's public-school students.

The idea for the Literacy Coalition was conceived when former CEO Stacey Wang realized that the Ed Fund and other partners with shared missions were missing an opportunity to share knowledge, problem-solve together, and coordinate their city-wide efforts. Stacey and Bitia Nazarian, Executive Director of 826 Valencia, convened the first meeting in April 2022 and the Ed Fund now serves as the fiscal sponsor for this innovative Coalition. Bitia shares that, "Working in the Coalition allows for greater impact. When you're a single organization, you're looking at what is your unique challenge... But when you're working in coalition, you're exploring an entire system. So, the solutions can then be systems-oriented."

The Ed Fund would like to thank its partners and elevate the important work of each of the Literacy Coalition partners: 826 Valencia, Raising a Reader, Reading Partners, San Francisco Department of Youth, Children & Their Families (DCYF), San Francisco Parent Coalition, SFUSD, Springboard Collaborative, and Tandem Partners in Early Learning.

"It's not about the individual literacy providers, but really it takes the whole community: It takes educators, principals. It takes a whole village."- Roberta Gonzalez, Program Supervisor from Coalition member Tandem Partners in Early Learning

2022-23 COMMUNITY PARTNERS

We believe the Bay Area is stronger when we work together which is why we are proud to have thought partners in these organizations across the city and beyond.

CIRCLE THE SCHOOLS PARTNERS

CELEBRATING BACK TO SCHOOL GALA 2022: PUBLIC SCHOOL PROUD

When we say we are Public School Proud, we truly mean it. We are grateful for the entire Ed Fund community – the team, Board, Leadership Council, Young Leaders Council, community partners and donors who joined us to celebrate our students’ progress, and our shared achievements as a community in October 2022 at the Ed Fund’s annual Back to School Gala. Together, we raised nearly $500,000 to power the Ed Fund’s mission, ensuring another strong school year ahead.

At the Ed Fund’s Back to School Gala in 2022, Ed Fund Board of Directors President Becky Karsh shared about the Ed Fund’s impact from her vantage point. “As a former elementary music teacher, I know the power of an in-person learning experience and the strength that schools play in creating strong networks and communities. Access to strong public education is the foundation of our democracy... I wanted to get involved with the San Francisco Education Fund because of their mission to mobilize the community to support equitable access to a quality education for public school students.”
